Pay Curb Verdict Tuesday

Times News Services

WASHINGTON-The powerful AFL-CIO and the auto union today appeared ready to scuttle President Nixon's economic game plán. The verdict will be known Tuesday.

The outcome appeared to hinge primarily on how much direct control the government would have over pay increases after the current wage-price freeze expires.

Treasury Secretary John Connally said the pay board set up by Nixon would make 'final' day-to-day decisions and he personally urged AFL-CIO president George Meany to sit on that panel of 15 members — five each from the public, labor and manage-without backing-from labor-and active participation by Meany. Connally acknowl-edged the administration would find it "extremely dif-ficult" to achieve Nixon's goal of cutting inflation in half by the end of 1972.

But Meany declined to make any commitments, saying Connally had left "serious questions" unanswered. Instead, he called a tractal meeting Tuesday of faderation's 35member executive council and invited United Auto Workers president Leonard Workers president Leonard Woodcock as well as Teamsters president James E. Fitzsimmons to help forge a united strategy

Degree Isn't What It Used to Be

A university degree is worth considerably less than it was a year ago, according to a survey by the federal department of manpower.

The survey is part of a preliminary report on aployers' regulrements for 1971, compared with 1970 figures.

In almost every category of university degree from bachelor of arts to doctorate in engineering — demand by employers for the university graduate has decreased.

In some cases, the decrease is dramatic. For example, employers hired 55 per cent less masters in engineering in 1971 than they did in 1970.

Even the previously highly regarded Ph.D., the ultimate in degrees, decreased in demand generally by 31 per cent.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) The 33 violent deaths in California prisons during the last 20 months are clear evidence of a "revolutionary attack" on the system, state penal officials have charged in a lengthy report.

James Hall, state board of corrections chairman, says in the 56-page report issued Friday the attack "is being encouraged by some members of organizations such as the National Lawyers Guild, the underground press and other underground press and other misguided individuals."

The report intersperses accounts of prison incidents with references to such well-known supporters of prison cases as actress Jane Fonda and radical student and faculty-campus leaders.

The "assault by revolu-tionaries" started, the report says, after a tower officer killed three convicts in Janyard to break up a gang fight at Soledad prison, 11 miles south of San Francisco.

An item here about Anne Murray a few weeks ago brought this response from Leonard T. Rambeau. "As her business manager I would like to point out that Anne has recently purchased a home here in Toronto and is very adamant in her concern that she remain Canadian and continue to live in this country... She makes a very strong distinction about working south of the border and living south of the border. To her they're separable." Apparently we weren't the only ones to express concern about a possible loss of Miss Murray to the States.

Degree Isn't What It Used to Be

A university degree is worth considerably less than it was a year ago, according to a survey by the federal department of manpower.

. The survey is part of a preliminary report on ployers' requirements for 1971, compared with 1970 figures.

In almost every category of university degree from bachelor of arts to doctorate in engineering — demand by employers for the university graduate has decreased.

In some cases, the decrease is dramatic. For example, employers hired 55 per cent less masters in engineering in 1971 than they did in 1970.

Even the previously highly regarded Ph.D., the ultimate in degrees, decreased in demand generally by 31 per cent.

The recently-released Manpower statistics also put a hole in the argument that science degrees will always get jobs before arts degrees. At the graduate level, opportunities worked out about equally. Standard bachelor or arts degree holders and honors BA holders suffered demand decreases of 35 and 44 per cent respectively.

Jobs for standard bachelors of science de-creased in demand by 44 per cent while those for honors science degrees decreased by 33 per cent. * * *

John Atcheson of the Canada Manpower Centre said. there are 'quite a lew' unemployed university graduates who have applied for assistance to Manpower.

But Victoria avoids much of the unemployment problem for graduates because few large firms have head offices or manufacturing facilities here, he said.

"Opportunities for university graduates in Victoria are limited," Atcheson said. "Students have to gear their educational studies around the type of work offered around here."

He said forest and fourist industries probably take in the greatest proportion of univers'y graduates around Victoria.

"Young people should be more realistic." Atcheson said, "and meet the demands of the labor market."

division of Manpower, said university graduates have "gone through a difficult two years," for jobs.

He said the economic restrictions imposed by U.S. president Nixon will not help the situation for American comment in anticipation of Finance Minister Edgar Benson's new tax measure, currently before the House of Commons.

But Fleming said the Canadian government has tended to hire more university graduates recently, and the B.C. government has also indicated it plans to hire more graduates.

A decrease in demand for doctorates is explainable, Fleming said, but the fact that Canadian universities are turning out more Ph.Ds than are needed by employers. Another factor is that the "brain-drain" of highly-qualified Canadians to the U.S. has slowed down recently, leaving more qualified Canadian Ph.Ds to compete for a limited number of jobs

In all faculties of university education, says the Man-power report, demand for bachelor degrees at the "pass" level has decreased 28 per cent since 1970. Honors bachelor degrees decreased 20 per cent on the average.

"All industrial sectors generally reported a decrease in requirements in nearly all disciplines and at nearly all levels of study." the report said.

More noticeable decreases in requirements between 1970 and 1971 were reported by the education community with 85 per cent fewer honors arts graduates hired; mining and fuels, 82 per cent fewer masters degrees hired; transportation and communication, 47 per cent fewer arts graduates hired; and manufacturing, 64 and 60 per cent fewer arts and science graduates, respectively, hired.

The Manpower report shows a general increase in sa-laries paid to newly-hired university graduates. The increases ranged from 9.6 per cent for a B.A. graduate in com-munications down to little or no change for most doctorates.

LONDON (Reuter) — A delicate new phase appears to be unfolding in Ireland's struggle to come to terms with its turbulent history.

For the first time, a continuing dialogue aimed at political reconciliation is in progress among all three governments concerned with ending bloodshed and violence in Northern Ireland. Northern Ireland.

The search for a peace formula is hazardous, beset by difficulties rooted in history and conducted against a back-ground of bombs and bullets.

Many observers view the present three-way process of contacts and consultation as a last hope of averting anarchy or civil war.

The latest stage in negotiations began with the two-day summit meeting in late September among the prime minister of Britain, Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic the first tripartite top-level talks since 1925.

AGREE TO TALK

Prime Ministers Edward Heath of Britain, Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland and Jack Lynch of the largely Roman Catholic republic conclude their 10 hours of talks without, reaching any solu-tions. But their meetings were friendly and they agreed to go on talking.

The decision to hold further tripartite sessions was re-garded as one of the few hopeful signs in a situation darkened by a growing threat from the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which is pledged to achieve the reunification of Ireland by violent means if necessary.

The IRA itself is split between the traditional (more moderate) wing and the more militantly extremist Provisionals. But it has spearhead hombines and specifies in ed bombings and shootings in bloodstained Ulster, where more than 100 persons have died since August, 1969, when violence flared following civil rights demonstrations.

Basically, the Northern Ire-land conflict arises from the apparently irreconcilable nature of its two communitiesa one-million-strong Protestant majority that has held the reins of power for 50 years, and the Roman Catholic minority of 500,000 people who say they have always been treated as second-class citizens.

One hundred and fifty recruits at Royal Roads Military College learned a good deal about teamwork — and mud—as they ran the traditional obstacle race at the college Wednesday.

The course covers about three miles through rugged terrain and there are 53 obstacks from high walls to mud holes.

School authorities point out that one of the most important ingredients needed for successful completion is teamwork—along with determination and plain old stamina.

Considerate as ever about the welfare of the men, the authorities ever lay on a nice cold bath in the icy waters of the lower lake on the school grounds by way of refreshment after the ordeal.

Once over the finish line, however, the recruits become Junior Cadets in the Regular Officer Training Plan.

The Custodians

International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission on the effects of . over the past few months. The ecosalmon fisheries would be disastrous The loss to potential fisheries could be as much as $71 millions.

The ecological and physical effects would be equally serious: removal of sediment by the dam would have ruinous effects on the Fraser delta and the nourishment potential of the river. And the study claims that flood control of the Fraser could be achieved much more cheaply and effectively than by the proposed power dam in the Moran canyon, some 25 miles north of Lillooet.

The study reveals some of the intricacies of the natural system of salmon production which has evolved over thousands of years. Half of the Fraser sockeye originate. above the Moran site and the spawning grounds and lakes upstream from this section could produce a much larger annual fish population than is now the case. A dam at Moran would make this almost impossible - no feasible plan has ever been devised that could get the salmon over the dam to the spawning grounds or enable the fry to come down-river to continue the

As Environment Minister Jack Davis said last spring: "Construction of a big dam at Moran would have catastrophic effects on our sockeye runs. It would put an end, forever, to the hopes of a big increase in the rearing of young fish."

The minister was equally concerned with other effects of such a high dam - it has been calculated generations as the destroyers of

Mr. Davis summed the whole situation up nicely with his comment: "It's not only a fish-versus-power dispute; it's an environment-versusenergy dispute."

The Moran proposal presents us with a clear choice: wipe out forever much of the existing fisheries and other ecology of the province's main river artery, and destroy the vast potential which exists for increased development of this resource - in return for the addition of a large increment to the hydro power resources of the province through a means which nuclear technology may soon render obsolete.

Premier Bennett has been firm in rejecting proposals for the dam if. it will damage the fisheries. He has been equally firm in rejecting the introduction of nuclear power which would present possible pollution problems of its own.

It really boils down to a decision as to how much we are prepared to alter our planet in order to increase the productive capacity of the country. When we are dealing with the possibility of destroying for all future time the living cyclical phenomena established by nature over eons, we should have some serious thoughts on what we, as a passing generation of one species, are doing to the priceless treasures of which we are very temporary custodians. Will we become known to future at 700 to 800 feet. He foresees much of what we held in trust?

Cause and Effect

THERE IS A GROWING CONcern in Britain that the "silent majority" will become less silent and that a period of repression could ensue as a result of IRA terrorism, anti-police crimes and soccer hooliganism, to name three current examples of violent behavior.

The New Statesman, a noted left-wing journal, is attempting to head off right-wing extremism and concludes in a recent article on the cause of violence: "The way to fight the emotionalism (of the silent majority) is with a cool head; hard facts versus the fake evidence. But that is not all. We must fight them with a new set of social values:

homes before roads, parks before factories, people before profits . there is one single cause of violence: the brutalizing rat-race in which we allow ourselves to compete."

Without getting bogged down in sentimentalism, it is well to look beyond incidental change for the source of discontent, The frantic rush of modern life is the probable root cause of violence and accompanying repression: the rat-race catches up with the rich as well as the poor.

By concentrating on moderation of the pace of life we will have a better chance to find the answers which bedevil us.

When all literate Canadians know that Canada buys twice as much from the United States as Japan does (and has not fought its neighbor since the idiotic War of 1812) the president's ignorance of the trade figures seemed unbelievable. If he didn't know them, the rest of the government, the Congress and the American public must know much less.

According to George Bain, Ottawa Mail, "Canadian officials wept" on hearing Mr. Nixon's extraordinary blooper. But perhaps they should have saved their tears for larger problems, including their own bad economic advice to Prime Minister Trudeau in recent years.

The Canadian visitor there, if he seeks out the right men, will be humiliated to discover his own relative ignorance of his own country.

To be sure, the information does not always reach the White House and seldom reaches the Congress. Thanksgiving, celebrated in North America as a day for family reunions, bountiful dinners and festivities, originated as a day to mark the completion of the harvest and render homage to the spirit who caused the fruits and crops to grow.

The celebration is ancient and universal. And its links go back to the Old Testament, where reference is made in Proverbs.

Christians in Victoria and across Canada will this weekend mark the Thanksgiving ritual with special church services and a recounting, hrief as it may be, of the things Canadians have to express thankfulness for.

The origin of the celebration as we know it is generally attributed to a thanksgiving festival held by the Plymouth colony of pilgrims in 1621 at Plymouth, Mass. But they were only continuing a ritual brought with them from the Old World,

Canada has celebrated a Thanksgiving Day since long before it was a nation, and the trend of that celebration followed the pattern of the ritual evolved in the United States.

The holiday, despite its religious association, has a distinctly secular flavor. In the 19th century, it traditionally featured such autumn foods as pumpkin, corn on the cob, roasted new potatoes and a young roasting fowl.

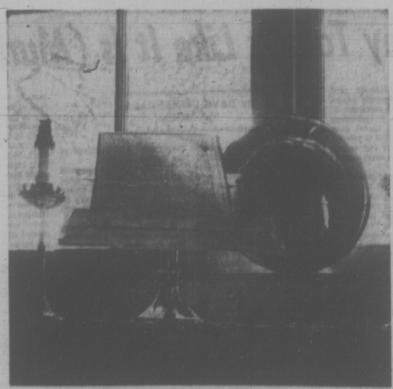

The Jack Raiph photographs on this page have a special significance this weekend, as a nother mannfestation of man's continuing tribute of thanksgiving to his God.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) Philadelphia Eagles of the National . Football League have agreed to transfer seats of ticket holders whose view of the field is blocked by players standing along the meeting with state Sen. Ben-jamin R. Dinolow to settle a suit Donolow had filed asking that no more football games be played in the new Veterans Stadium until the seating.

Lawyer Cecil Branson, acting for the accused, questioned at length city police detective Lou Truesdale on his procedure in questioning Amos after he was picked up

Branson asked Truesdale Friday whether the accused had been given the statutory warning of his rights before he was told he was a suspect.

The detective said Antos had been warned after he in fact became a suspect, after "stains which looked like blood" had been found on clothing belonging to the accused Amos was picked up by Lake Cowichan RCMP and held for questioning by Truesdale and city detective John Markin on an order from city police, RCMP Const. Lou Cecchini testified Friday.

Conjugal Visits In Prisons Eyed

General Jean-Pierre Goyer says the penitentiaries service will try to organize a program of conjugal visits for married prisoners.

However, he added in an in-terview, that doesn't by far solve the sex problem in fed-eral penitentiaries.

"If the intention is to say any inmate should have normal sexual relations instead of, for example, illegal hogosexual relations, then we should also pay attention to those who are unmarried."

The average age of the 7,270 male prisoners is 35 and many of them are unmarried. At present, they are denied any sexual relationship with a

It won't happen, so don't wait for it. But just this year 12 clubs, six in the east, and six in the west, of the National Hockey League, won't finish first. Six out of 14 won't even make the playoffs. In the east particularly, the hopeful scene-stealers are lying in their teeth.

Let's put it this way.

Does Detroit, for instance, expect to get out of last place, and make the playoffs, all in one short season? Not really.

and make the playoffs, all in one short season? Not really.

And not with Gordie Howe being retired. He was their best hockey player last year, and also their best one-armed hockey player. Now, they have neither. Sure, they may be an improvement. No Red Wing team should ever allow 320 goals again. But a contender? Never!

Or take Vancouver Canadas. They were off and fiving or take Vancouver Canucks. They were off and flying last season. But they got pulled up short when the real skating began. This year, they have more depth, a better defence, and a full NHL year behind them. It all helps. But they won't get that quick jump again. Their goalkeeping isn't yet solld, and they lack over-all speed. But have you heard that in the news releases? No. And you won't.

Buffalo anyone? Punch Imlach is the wisest of all NHL coaches, it says here. He got some good old friends to help him through that first season, and ended a jump ahead of the Canucks. But Imlach isn't as pleased as Punch with the Sabres' chances of getting into the top four. Too much mediocrity is the problem. Plus a few good goal-scorers. Thus no

But wait! If there's an exception to the rule, here's one with an exciting future.

Toronto Maple Leafs got all the way up to fourth last spring after a horrendous start; and after it had been freely predicted that as the Leaf's young players went, so would go the team. Well, those kids came up big after Christmas, and were hammering almost everyone at the finish. Over the summer, those youngsters could have grown up a bit more. And really, they're better than they think they are and have the goalkeeping to go with it. Just wait and see. They haven't been giving out all their secrets.

But if it is youngsters on the move ahead who will supply the surprises, it's the oldtimers, just getting by, or already by, who cause a team to tumble.

who cause a team to tumble. So, who would you pick to fail from Montreal, defending So, who would you pick to fail from indices, extended to the NHL in 1970-71, and all-powerful Boston Bruins, who scored a record 399 goals?

One must drop down, if Toronto is to move up.

Will the loss of Jean Beliveau, one of the game's truly great players, burt the Habs that much? Can New York constituted to applied the game of the game o tinue to sparkle defensively in a league that is goal crazy? Or are the mighty Bruins human after all? Shuffle the facts with sentiment, and what do you get?

It may require a memory test to recall what happened to Boston in last spring's semifinal. But the simple truth is that the Bruins, forced to abandon their hell-for-leather, regularseason style, couldn't adjust to change. They found themselves in a different ball game. Suddenly, they were out. But they will bounce back, though not as tough. Age will exact a for it. That's where their power base lies. And that's the secret they haven't told. But it will tell on them.

So, forget what you may have read elsewhere. Put the Rangers fourth, behind Toronto, and give those first two places to Boston and Montreal. Or Montreal and Boston. Both belong. But only until it is recalled that Beliveau won't be around, and Henri Richard will be one whole year older.

So the Habe can't possibly win.

And if that puts Boston on top, that's where the big, bad Bruins belong. None of the others are good enough to dispute the facts. But will they admit it as they finish in this order: Boston, Montreal, Toronto, New York, Vancouver, Buffalo

Pruning-Special Method for Each Situation

WORK FOR WEEK

By JACK BEASTALL

All the sciences have a language strictly their own, containing a vocabulary strange to the layman. Atomic science and space exploration have added hundreds of words unfamiliar to us, but of vital sig-nificance to those concerned.

Gardening, a science of con-siderable age, originally adopted terms in common day-to-day usage, each having a definite meaning.

Unfortunately, words in use every day tend to have altered meanings with each

SCANDINAVIAN DEFENCE

For instance, the word 'dig" originally had but two applications; applied to the soil, it indicated lifting a shovelful and replacing it upside down; applied to a plant it meant lifting it from its present place in the soil.

With the present generation "dig" means to take notice or to understand. Example:
"Dig that crazy outfit!" "I don't dig art."

Today we tend to consider many gardening terms as synonymous when actually they refer to distinct opera-

Chronic Pollution Of Seas Reported

OTTAWA - The North At antic Ocean is chronically polluted with oil, according to the executive director of the Science Council of Canada.

Dr. P. D. McTaggart-Cowan, who also acted as head of the government task force on the Arrow oil spill clean-up last year, reported here today that. Canadian oceanographers have in recent months discovered increasing amounts of oil while collecting plankton. DOESN'T KNOW

The oil particles were found lodged in fine-meshed nets used to collect floating plankton, considered to be the basis of the ocean food chain. The nets in some areas became so contaminated with oil they had to be washed between

COMMENT ON SEMI-FINALS

The Grand Old Man of Danish Chess, S. Jensen of Vojens, writes: "It has been a silent and sad 1971 for us chess fans in Denmark. Our hope, our pride, our best card, our Bent Larsen, was knocked out! Of course, Bobby Fischer is a better man, but beating

INDONESIA: A Study in Progress

By The Associated Press

Indonesia, a farflung chain of equatorial islands which demolished a major Communist movement on its soil six years ago, is showing progress that is in marked contrast to its neighbors in Southeast Asia.

Jakarta, capital of the sprawling nation, still is plagued by poverty but it is emerging from the era of neglect that made it one of the shabbiest cities in the Far East.

High-rise office buildings and hotels are springing up along Jakarta's main street and long lines of cars move along the six-lane superhighway to the fashionable suburh of Kebajoran. Kebajoran.

Water Rights Jurisdiction To Province

Greater Victoria Water Board will lose jurisdiction over water rights within its watershed area on Tuesday, under an order released by the provencial cabinet this week.

The order transfers water rights from the board to the provincial government.

Negotiations for the transfer have been in progress since 1966, when the B.C. legislature B.C. legislature passed a proclamation bill cancelling the Greater Victoria Water District Act and giving the water rights to the province.

A spokesman for the provincial water rights branch said Wednesday the Greater Victoria watershed was the only part of the province still under private legislation outside the provincial Water Act.

Upward said one result of the transfer of rights is that the $2,000 a year for a permit.

"I had imagined," Mackenzie wrote, "that the Canadi-ans who accompanied me were the most expert canoe men in the world; but they are very inferior to these people, as they themselves ac-knowledged, in conducting these vessels."

After about eight miles of this downstream travel they came to a large village, and saw the inhabitants "running from house to house, some armed with bows and arrows. others with spears, and many with axes, as if in a state of great alarm . . An Ode to the Mystical River

Some of us worship rivers, you know. Because that is where we have found what is richest and indefinably, unfailingly—most stirring in hature. Rivers for us are mystical places which have moved or soothed us to the pit of our souls.

If you have been there and know what I mean, noth ing more needs saying about this book beyond word that it serves as a magnificent elixir, uncorking, awakening

On the face of it Come Wade The River is what some call a coffee table book, a large thin volume of impressive photographs by Ralph Wahl with sparse text by Roderick Haig-Brown.

Some people will buy it just to impress the visitors. It will lie casually at hand to leaf through and likely these sort will be most impressed with the price — $17.95—which is indeed a bit of a stunner. But to hell with these people.

Mostly this a book for fishermen because they are the people who wade the rivers and store the images. And venturing a little into the river is perhaps the only way to be touched by its magic, by the tingling, sometimes fearful, sometimes slightly ecstatic sense of joining a bigger

In fact this book is the product of one of those happy meetings which produce some of the picest little things in life. It is two talents joining hands for a while to say or do something even better.

First Ralph Wahl, because the book is mainly his big pictures, moody studies in black and white of northwest rivers and the people who fish them.

What his camera has caught hest is the spread and thrust of our rivers and the great sweep of land through which they glide or surge. (Because my early years of river worshipping were on the smaller, tighter streams of Eastern Canada. I yearned for but didn't find glimpses of their kind of water. Maybe Wahl will take his camera east some day. But then why would he bother?)

Ralph Wahl is from Bellingham where the family has tive eye and soul to catch the rivers as he has but also a good deal of hard work

What can anyone say about Roderick Haig-Brown which hasn't been said? Certainly there's nothing about rivers and fishing anyone can say that he hasn't said bet-

It can never be said that Miss Gordon's book is tedious or that it is totally an ego trip, but the ego is constantly there, peering over the shoulders of all the characters with whom she shiftingly fills her stage.

In fact, the most intriguing and lasting aspect of the book is not so much the portrait that emerges of Ruth Gordon, as a lively irrepressible warm-hearted elderly urchin-

In this case there is an ideal match-up. Abbey possesses the kind of flinty individutary desert juniper tree; both are hardy and defiant. And his musings about life are often as prickly and abrasive as the cactus.

As far as Abbey is concerned the desert has only one real enemy — man. His book is partly an elegy for a land that is slowly losing its splendor to spreading ribbons

He believes the desert should be experienced directly and alone. If you're not prepared to undergo the dis-comforts of heat and thirst, you might as well forget it.

Abbey felt plenty of both as a ranger in the Arches National Monument park in Utah in the years before the hordes

An item here about Anne Murray a few weeks ago brought this response from Leonard T. Rambeau. "As her business manager I would like to point out that Anne has recently purchased a home here in Toronto and is very adamant in her concern that she remain Canadian and continue to live in this country... She makes a very strong distinction about working south of the border and living south of the border. To her they're separable." Apparently we weren't the only ones to express concern. parently we weren't the only ones to express concern about a possible loss of Miss Murray to the States.

Senior Citizens Achieve a Self-Help Milestone

By PAUL MOSS Times Staff

An idea born over cups of tea in the Saanich Silver Threads Centre 19 months ago takes shape toward the end of this month, when 25 senior citizens make their new home in a condominium unique in Canadian housing developments.

A First

It is unique both in its meth-od of financing and because it is the first time a group of re-tired citizens has worked di-rectly with a builder in buying, planning and developing a site for the specific housing needs of the elderly.

"Worked" is the operative word, for this was a scheme involving consultation with all three levels of government, miles of tortuous red tape, endless meetings, setbacks and frustrations by the score.

The result of their efforts is an ultra-modern, 15-suite con-dominium on Seaton Road, Saanich, which combines the ease and comfort of apart-ment living with pride of home ownership and a com-munity identity. munity identity - all at a

There are seven one-bedroom units costing $13,900 each, and eight two-bedroom units at $14,900 each. Those who will live in them say they compare favorably with apartments costing up to $30,000 elsewhere.

The units are well designed and spacious, each complete with a handsome brick fire-place, wall-to-wall carpeting, drapes and all appliances, in-cluding washer and dryer,

Likely Property

Then the real work began, eset by continual obstacles

In June, 1970, the group found a likely property at Irma Street and plans were drawn up for a 38-suite, three-storey condominium. Resi-dents of the area, surveyed by the Silver Threads Service, welcomed the project.

But the plan died right there. Victoria city council's Advisory Planning Advisory Commission said the development would be an intrusion into an attractive single-family residential neighborhood, and the recommendation was and the recommendation was later endorsed by council.

UNION HEAD ANGERED

Shrum 'Tactics' Criticized

shrum-said in Victoria Friday the government had "pulled the rug out" from under one of Hydro's unions and the union president responded today by calling Shrum's comments "shabby tactics."

Shrum said government re-appointment of Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz as arbitrator in Hydro's contract dispute had put the Office and Tech-nical Employees Union "on the spot" because members intended crossing the IBEW picket lines Friday.

There are also about 2,000 members of the OTEU employed by Hydro and they had not crossed the IBEW picket lines. But Shrum said they had planned to Friday.

OTEU president Ron Bone said in Vancouver today Shrum is guilty of "shabby tactics" in making such com-ments and he accused the hydro chairman of trying to "split the rapport" his union has with Hydro's electrical workers.

Bone said both the IBEW and the OTEU were aware that office workers would have had to work on Friday in order to collect their pay ch ques and in order to qualit for Thanksgiving holiday pay

He said that if the IBEW hadn't ended its strike, the picket lines would have been lifted on Friday anyway.

They reportedly saw each other frequently over the following four years, particularly when Margaret lived in Ottawa with a girlfriend in 1970 after graduating with honors in political science from Simon Fraser Universi-ty. Although they dated occasionally, the romance re-mained a well-kept secret until the wedding day.

Trudeau, who gave all the appearances of being a con-firmed bachelor before the wedding, had dated a number of women on a regular basis before and after becoming Prime Minister. Two of his best known dates were Monand American actress Barbra

About the only advance hint of the impending marriage was the somewhat unusual speech he made in Toronto on March 3, the night before the marriage, on the subject of women's role in society:

"The two elements that compose society — men and women — form a couple, or system, of forces, even at the group level." Trudeau said.

I ... take thee ... to be my wedded wife (husband), to have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do us part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I give thee

It used to be that a man and woman would exchange the marriage vow before they lived together. The promise to stay together "till death do us part" was often broken as divorce statistics show. Nevertheless it was a choice of taking the vow or being branded as "living in sin" by society.

Nowadays more and more young couples are setting up house without going through the marriage ceremony. Some say that they plan to eventually marry, but want to try living together first to see whether it works out, before making a lifelong commitment. Others hever want to marry legally, because they feel it is impossible to predict what will happen in the future. And others feel that no formal eventually is presented to another.

"Young people know that it's too easy to marry and too hard to get unmarried," said Rev. Walter Donald, a local Anglican minister. "They've seen first-hand the disastrous effects of broken marriages, where both parties were hurt. The problem was that the couples got married in the first place.

Viable Alternative

"At its best, trial marriage may be a via-ble alternative. People often say that they are fed-up with the tinsel wedding ceremony with the white wedding gown and bells. A couple may agree to live together in a mar riage commitment without the legal hassles, without destroying other people or involving children. It may be a way of settling their doubts about formal marriage.

"At its worst, trial living can be an un itment to another person."

Donald said the traditional marriage cere-Donaid said the traditional marriage ceremony is gradually disappearing, as an increasing number of people regard it as a "mockery" of what marriage is all about.

The pleasure principle may be involved in common-law relationships, Ney said. "It's like when you get tired of one car, you trade it in for another. Neither feels ready to make the life-long commitment to living together involved in a legal marriage.

"We don't know what's going to happen in the future."

John said. "In a loose situation like this we are free to stay together or to leave, as we wish."

They say that the legal aspects of marriage would infringe on this freedom. Should the time come when they no longer want to live together, they would have to tangle with the divorce laws to, legally dissolve their relationship. This would involve proving adultery or other marital offences, or a separation of three years.

Not Forever

"We both assume our relationship will go on, but we don't think in terms of forever and ever. That's so far away, there's no point in worrying about it," said John. "Six months is about as far ahead as we ever plan." The couple said they have no plans for going through a legal marriage unless they decide to have children.

"It would be easier on the children," said Mary. "Otherwise they face being stigmatized by society. Children are very sensitive about being different from others."

The two emphasize the importance of individuality.

"The marriage relationship is secondary to finding fulfillment within yourself," said John. "You can't base your existence or try to find happiness in another person. If that person disappears or dies, you're left with nothing."

CHICAGO (UPI) — Casting an eye to his own bare pate, sex researcher Dr. William Masters accused "the bald-headed generation" of refusing to recognize sex as a natural body function. The young, he said, are coming along better:

Masters, 55, co-author with his wife, Virginia Johnson, of Human Sexual Response and Human Sexual Inadequacy, recently appeared on a six-dember panel to discuss the fu-

It was sponsored by Playboy.

"We of the bald-headed generation have never treated sex as a natural function," Masters said, but just as a baby begins to breathe, its sexual organs begin to function, and both actions come naturally later on.

The catch, he said, is that a person "can hold his breath" a short time, his bowels a longer time, but sex has the unique facility of delay, of denial.' 'It is the only natural function that has been denied." As a consequence, we know a lot more about breathing than we do about sex.

"We don't know the vaguest thing about human sexuality," Masters said, "We're all guessing, and sometimes even

Masters said young persons, however "are moving to some concept of naturalness." He pins hope on "their lack of inhibition, relative to my generation."

As he envisions it, there's no reason that men and women can't function sexually in their 80s and 90s. Dissemination of information, once we learn more, will change things, he said. Some of the other panelists took a lighter view of the problem than did Masters. Pop philosopher Alan Watts said he entirely agreed with the researcher, "but I think he's too serious about it."

"There's nothing more boring than a nudist camp," Watts said. "All life is based on conceal and reveal. There-

Dr. Joel Fort, 41, an author and lecturer, disagreed with Watts. "I think sex can stand on it's own, let's say two feet, if we have the dimension of love," he said.

"I don't think the future of sex depends on concealment. As the basis of love and mutual equality, sex will survive and flourish," he said. "That's what the goal should be."

Author Morton Hunt said he thinks healthy people laugh about sex, but it's the kind of laughter "that is not the antithesis of seriourses."

The new measure, the main

Points Repeated In Tax Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The January target date for implementation of proposed income-tax changes moved one day closer with minimal progress on the tax bill in the Commons Friday.

No Liberal MPs rose to Section 1. The January target date for implementations from credit unions and co-operatives.

Businessman Llayd R. Crouse (PC)—South Shore) accused the government of "so-claistic and bureaucratic acts which hamstring and interfere with the free-enterprise system."

No Liberal MPs rose to speak as four Conservatives and one New Democrat used up the three hours' debating time, presenting mainly the same criticisms their parties have made since the tax pro-posals were introduced for formal first reading June 30.

From the moment Mr. Trudeau became prime minister in 1968, there have been coun-tiess stories about cabinet ministers who allegedly influrence him more than others. Sharp Wary On Tanker Route

OTTAWA (CP) - External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday he is "not quite certain" whether it would be useful for him to make another appeal to the United States government about the dangers of an oil tanker route down the British Columbia coast from Alaska. The government in the past has cautioned the U.S. gov-

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON Correcting our perspective on Thankagiving.

Thanksgiving Sunday most of our churches is cele-brated in a way to give the worshippers comforting feelings of well-being. And, of course, it will be pleasant to have a holiday on Monday.

We Canadians do have much for which to be thankful despite the current eco-nic distress. Our material standard of living is one of the highest in the world. We are richly endowed with natural resources. Our social and political life has a high degree of stability. There are some distressing pockets of poverty in our nation, but we are, or the whole, a very comfortable be rather smug in our giving of thanks? Does not our na-tional thanksgiving tend to de-generate into self-congratula-tion, a matter of swanking before God? Do we not often have a peculiar perspective on thanksgiving?

Surely it is a distorted thanksgiving which does not arouse compassion, active compassion, toward those who cannot give thanks as we can

Dear Mr. Nixon:

NIXON BITTER

Mr. Nixon was "particulrly bitter" because, he said, many of the Davis proposals were made by the Liberals weeks ago and the premier now is making political capi-tal out of the employment omy.

The second part was a promise of a $63-million provincial program of public works and construction which would create about 42,000 jobs in the province this winter.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon and New Democrat Stephen

Lewis immediately criticized the Conservative premier for leaving his job proposals to such a late date, and then using them as an election

premier for saying "absolute-ly nothing" about the econ-omy for the first three weeks of the campaign and then acting in an "11th-hour panic to retrieve public favor" be-fore the Oct. 21 vote.

However, Premier Davis did say at the outset of the campaign that although he would have few promises to make there could be several "announcements" before election day.

And that is where a ruling party has the advantage in a campaign: Its leader can announce where the opposition first announcements Sept. 13, the same day he called the election. They concerned the exemption of senior citizens from medicalcare payments and financial aid, to Ontario book publishers.

Mr. Davis did little in the way or active campaigning in the first week, and opened his formal campaign Sept. 21 with an appeal to the electorate to return the Tories on their record.

MAKES SELF KNOWN

Since then, Tory strategy has been very much a low-key, meet-the-people ap-proach aimed at making Mr. Davis familiar to the voters as a premier, rather than an education minister as he was prior to March 1.

During this part of the campaign—which Mr. Lewls branded a "presidential tour"—the premier spoke only generally on the issues.

With Friday's major statements the Tory campaign is entering a new phase with the voters about to hear a whole raft of "announcements."

Mr. Davis took the opportunity Friday to issue an "itin-erary" for the coming week which provided as much hard news for reporters as any of his campaign forays.

In it, he said he would announce Tuesday some "vision-ary, exciting and realistic" proposals from Buckminster

EDMONTON (CP) - More than 20,000 students in eight districts north and west of the city were assured an extended Thanksgiving holiday Friday when 850 teachers took strike action in support of contract

But even as the strike start ed, the teachers and the school boards involved said they were ready to resume

However, there was only a remote possibility the talks would be resumed during the long weekend and as of Fri-day the two sides said they could not agree on the major issue in the dispute.

Don Corse, Alberta Teachers' Association welfare of-ficer and chief bargaining agent for the teachers, said the major issue was consulta-tion on board policy changes.

R. A. Bailey of Devon, Alta., chairman of the North Central West School Authorities Association—the bargain-ing agent for the boards, said the major issue was regional bargaining. He said the teacher's association was attempting, through strike action, to break down the concept of re-gional bargaining, a right granted to Alberta boards for the first time in 1970.

Mr. Bailey said the teachers have had their province-wide association backing them for pears but when the school boards decide to group together for bargaining purposes the teachers cry foul.
But their cry won't work because the solidarity of the boards now is stronger than ever he said.

ever he said.

Lawrence Truckey, chairman of the strike committee and a member of the teacher negotiating team, said the strike would continue until a settlement is reached. The negotiating representatives of each side have the right to sign contract and teachers could be back on the job within one day of a settlement being negotiated.

The teachers want a consultation clause in a new con-tract which would require each school board to notify the teachers of any policy changes affecting working

The school boards reject the concept, saying it will lead to a direct takeover of education

Mr. Truckey said the trust ees want a management rights clause to give them power to dictate working con-ditions and create a "masterservant relationship with the

But the teachers maintain education is too important to be left entirely in the hands of school boards and emphasize the need for teacher involvement in the decision making.

Walter Hughes of Edmonton, ATA president, said earlier many teachers involved in regional bargaining have been without a contract for more than a year. More than 50 percent of the province's teachers have consultation clauses ers have consultation clauses in their 1971 contracts and the

EXPECT RESULT

And in Battle River, the results of a strike vote by about 1,000 teachers in the central Alberta zone are expected early next week. Another 27,000 students would be affected by a strike in that area. area.

A strike in two southern areas, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, could affect an additional 16,000 students.

Teachers in those two areas, bargaining jointly, have rejected a conciliation award of al 6.8-per-cent wage increase over 28 months effective last September. Trustees said they had accepted the award and included a consul tation clause, a clause which teachers said would continue the same as it had in the past.

Seals Grab Goalie MONTREAL (CP) - Mon-

goalie Lyle Carter to Califor nia Golden Seals of the National Hockey League in exchange for left winger Randy Rota, Carter played with Montreal's American Hockey League farm team, the Voya-geurs, last season. Rota was with Providence Reds of the Best Exploits Loophole To Escape Suspension

LONDON (CP) - It looks as if soccer ace George Best is as effective in front of a disciplinary committee as he is in front of a rival's goal LIKE HOCKEY PENALTY

He's just avoided cooling his heels on the sidelines for a couple of months by finding a loophole in the game's laws when he was summoned to appear on charges of addressing cought language to a refing rough language to a ref-rough tanguage to a referere.

The Manchester United Star left the Football Association disciplinary room a free man when everyone was figuring on a two- or three-month suspension. Belfast-born Georgie explained that his rude remarks had been directed at a marks had been directed at a fellow player and not the ref during the game in early August against Chelsea. No law hars that.

It's not the first time the fiery Irishman has been stopped in his tracks for disciplinary reasons. He was sent off in 1968 in a World Cup game against Estudiantes of Argentina and suspended for the next two matches. He had a $250 fine and a 28-day sus-

Savoir Sweeps Kentucky Race

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) Altwood Stables, Savoir over-whelmed the field of seven other 3-year-old troiters Fri-day as the son of Stars Pride swept the 76th, $63,415 Kentucky Futurity in straight heats at Lexington Trots.

With trainer-driver Jimmy Arthur in the sulky, Savoir led all but the first few strides in the first heat and was in front all the way in the second to claim the victory in the third jewel of trotting's triple

Suspect Dewigged

BELFAST, Northers Ire-land (UPI) — British troops captured a suspected leader of the outlaw Irish Republican Army today when his wig fell off as he tried to escape an identity check, the army said. Jim Sullivan, 38, was caught when the car in which he was riding tried to run a down-town Belfast roadblock.

MADRID (AP) — Gregorio Peralta, Argentine heavy-weight, stopped Jose Manuel Ibar Urtain, Spain's heavy-weight champion, in the

HENRI IS CAPTAIN MONTREAL (CP) — Henri Richard, starting his 17th sea-son as a National Hockey League centre, has been named captain of Montreal Canadica pension early in 1870 for mis-behavior on the field and a year later a six-week suspen-sion with a record $625 follow-ing three bookings in 12

A booking is somewhat the equivalent of a hockey pen-alty, except that the player is not sent off but has his name not sent off but has his name put down in the referee's note-book. Three, bookings and a player is called in to London where he can be fined, suspended or, as in the case of Best, left with a sentence hanging over his head.

Best's over his head.

Best's recent brush with the occer authorities has left him sinscathed and, although he still has the six-week sus-pended sentence hanging over him, he is worse off only to the tune of costs for the two-lours bearing.

the tune of costs for the two-hour hearing.
Georgia, the 25-year-old idol of millions everywhere, is, however, only one of the vic-tims claimed by referees this season. Their new get-tough policy introduced recently has already seen 300 soccer play-ers booked and more than 60 sent off for behavior on the field which earlier would have gone unpunished.

gone unpunished.

But the FA, after it dismissed Best's case, now is heading into a row with the League Referees' and Linesmen's Association over the decision. Refs are planning to study the case and many be complaining to the FA that their efforts to clean up the game have been deflated.

EXPLOSIVE GAME Ray Tinkler, a ref who handled an explosive game be-tween Leeds and West Brom-wich Albion earlier this seawich Albion earner this sea-son in which three players were sent off and eight more hooked, says that it is time "everyone got together and sorted out the interpretation of soccep I aw s—and the sooner the better."

Meanwhile this soccer-crazed country can still enjoy the magic of George Best.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An organization of scientists has urged Atomic Energy Commission employees to refuse to work on a proposed atomic warhead test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

The Society for Social Responsibility in Science said in a letter to the commissioners of the AEC that it would give moral and, if necessary, legal and financial support to any AEC employees who refused to work on the test.

Canadian and Japanese scientists also have expressed doubt about the wisdom of setting off a five-megaton hydrogen bomb underground at Amchitka as the AEC wants to do.

An earthquake and a release of radioactivity into the ocean have been cited as possible results of the proposed explosion. The test now is awaiting approval by President Nixon.

The recently-released Manpower statistics also put a hole in the argument that science degrees will always get jobs before arts degrees.

At the graduate level, opportunities worked out about equally. Standard bachelor or arts degree holders and honors BA holders suffered demand decreases of 35 and 44 per cent respectively.

Jobs for standard bachelors of science de-creased in demand by 44 per cent while those for honors science degrees decreased by 33 per cent. * * *

John Atcheson of the Canada Manpower Centre said there are "quite a few" unemployed university graduates who have applied for assistance to Manpower.

But Victoria avoids much of the unemployment problem for graduates because few large firms have head offices or manufacturing facilities here, he said,

"Opportunities for university graduates in Victoria are limited," Atcheson said, "Students have to gear their educational studies around the type of work offered around hets."

He said forest and tourist industries probably take in the greatest proportion of university graduates around Victoria.

"Young people should be more realistic," Atcheson said, "and meet the demands of the labor market."

Senior Citizens Achieve a Self-Help Milestone

Among the plans on display was one for a complete town-house project, by designer-Kaj Lee Pedersen of Danish Designs and Builders.

"We all knew immediately this was what we were look-ing for," Mrs. Nielsen said, "He knew what we wanted, and to this day we haven't changed our minds."

Likely Property

Then the real work began, beset by continual obstacles and frustrations. Finding a Mr. driving round the streets look-second mortgage through the provincial government's home acquisition grant. It became into as the 5-5-5 plan.

The idea attracted a lot of publicity and interest at the time but no one followed it up until the Saanich Silver Threads members started their problems.

In June, 1970, the group found a likely property at Irma Street and plans were drawn up for a 38-suite, three-story condominium. Residents of the area, surveyed by the Silver Threads Service, welcomed the project.

But the plan died right there. Victoria city council's-Advisory Planning Advisory Commission said the develop-ment would be an intrusion into an attractive single-fami-ly residential neighborhood,

The search continued, pro-viding, in Mrs. Nielsen's words, "an undending educaing properties, provincial lands, Crown lands, dedicated parks, roads, sewers, storm drains, easements. . . ."

Again they located a prom-bing site, this time a small parcel of land on Jackson Street, and again the group had to apply for rezoning approval from Victoria.

'Wanted Feeling'

On this occasion, Mrs. Nielsen said, the residents of the area objected to the proposed development. "They just didn't want old people."

More meetings, more searching for land, more plans made and turned down, Finally, two days after Christmas Day last year, the group found a parcel on hilly Seaton Street, with a view of the mountains and the Sooke hitches in obtaining rezoning approval from Saanleh. Mrs. Nielsen said: "That wanted feeling was something we'll never forget."

The sod turning was last June 4, and the first senior citizens will start moving into their new apartments later cramped living with relatives, and in trailers and small apartments, they relish the thought of the comfort awaiting them. In fact excitement among the group has been running so high, Mrs. Nielsen said, they have been paying almost daily visits to view the progress of the work.

"A government chap said there was no need to wrotry about official inspections be-cause the building was being inspected every day by 25 nosy inspectors,'' she laughed.

Operating Costs

On completion, the development will be bought from Pedersen by the B.C. Housing Management Commission on behalf of the provincial government, and the commission in turn will sell the individual suites to the senior citizens. for a total of $216,500.

Because it is defined as an experimental housing project, it qualified for a $75,000 contribution from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. This will be used to finance the first mortgages.

It is estimated operating costs, including general main-tenance, fire insurance and cablevision, will come to about $12 a month for each suite. Pedersen says the Saanich tax department has in-dicated annual property taxes per unit will be about $300, less the $170 provincial homeowner grant.

UNION HEAD ANGERED

Shrum 'Tactics' Criticized

the government had "pulled the rug out" from under one of Hydro's unions and the union president responded today by calling Shrum's comments "shabby tactics."

Shrum said government re-appointment of Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz as arbitrator in Hydro's contract dispute with the International Broth-erhood of Electrical Workers had put the Office and Tech-nical Employees Union "on the spot" because members intended crossing the IBEW picket lines Friday.

WORKERS BACK

Two thousand members of the IBEW walked off the job Monday but returned to work Friday after the government to the dispute as arbitrator.

There are also about 2,000 members of the OTEU employed by Hydro and they had not crossed the IBEW picket lines. But Shrum said they had planned to Friday.

OTEU president Ron Bone said in Vancouver today. Shram is guilty of "shabby tacties" in making such comments and he accessed the hydro chairman of trying to 'split the rapport" his union has with Hydro's electrical workers,

Bone said both the IBEW and the OTEU were aware that office workers would have had to work on Friday in order to collect their pay che ques and in order to qualif for Thanksgiving holiday pay.

Victorians can look forward to lots of sunshine and warm temperatures for the Thanksgiving holiday weekend, according to the weather bureau at the Pat Bay airport.

Clear, sunny weather is forecast with temperatures in the middle 60s and dropping to the middle 40s at night.

OUTLOOK SHIFTS

One of the major resolutions being debated today reflects the shift in power from Social-Credit's westrn Canadian 1930s origins in Alberta to Quebec. The resolution calls for parallel French and English working units in the federal public service.

Gilles Caouette, the party's assistant research director and Real Caouette's son, says this maans separate units would be established right up to the deputy minister level under a Social Credit govern-

The Quebec group decided about two years ago that the national party should be re-surrected and Mr. Caouette has been travelling across the country seeking to drum up enthusiasm in the last year,

But it may have been a token of the Western Canada attitude toward Mr. Caouette that he was not invited to participate in the recent Alberta election, where the original Social Credit government lost to the Conservatives.

Mr. Caouette later had bitter words for Ernest Man ning, former Alberta premier and now a senator, as a major reason behind the fall of the Social Credit government in Alberta, where the party first triumphed.

Canadian firms, he said, have been curtailing employment in anticipation of Finance Minister Edgar Benson's new tax measure, currently before the House of Commons.

But Fleming said the Canadian government has tended to hire more university graduates recently, and the B.C. govern-ment has also indicated it plans to hire more graduates.

A decrease in demand for doctorates is explainable, Fleming said, but the fact that Canadian universities are turning out more Ph.Ds than are needed by employers. Another factor is that the "brain-drain" of highly-qualified Canadians to the U.S. has slowed down recently, leaving more qualified Canadian Ph.Ds to compete for a limited number of jobs requiring doctorates.

In all faculties of university aducation, says the Manpower report, demand for bachelor degrees at the "pass" level has decreased 28 per cent since 1970. Honors bachelor degrees decreased 20 per cent on the average.

"All industrial sectors generally reported a decrease in requirements in nearly all disciplines and at nearly all levels of study," the report said.

More noticeable decreases in requirements between 1970 and 1971 were reported by the education community with 85 per cent fewer honors arts graduates hired; mining and fuels, 82 per cent fewer masters degrees hired; transportation and communication, 77 per cent fewer arts graduates hired; and manufacturing, 64 and 60 per cent fewer arts and science graduates, respectively, hired.

The Manpower report shows a general increase in sa-laries paid to newly-hired university graduates. The increases ranged from 9.6 per cent for a B.A. graduate in com-munications down to little or no change for most doctorates.
